It then goes on to show the many ways that states fail away from the ideal, often because of the actions of the powerful and connected—and the consequences of those failures. It presents the expanding nature of crimes committed by the elderly, the characteristics of older criminals, and the response of the criminal justice system (including prisons and institutions) to elderly criminals, including diversion programs, community-based treatment programs, and special programs including health & mental health care services for older persons. The second part of the book covers victimization of the elderly. Research findings show that crimes committed disproportionately affect older people, and these types of crimes are growing in prevalence. Victimology, Seventh Edition, introduces students to the criminal justice system in the United States and its impact on crime victims. Authors William Doerner and Steven Lea provide a fresh look at the theoretical basis of victimology and then present the key facets of crime and its effects. They examine financial and social costs both to the individual and to the larger community. This new edition uses the theoretical foundation of victimology to establish a clear conceptual framework and reduce repetition. Emerging trends in the field receive greater emphasis in this edition, including non-adversarial resolutions that offer remediation for crime victims. Crimes like intimate-partner violence and victimization in work or school environments continue to be a toll, and the authors examine efforts to prevent these crimes as well as responses after an incident occurs. Doerner and Lae challenge students to rethink the current response to crime victims, and to develop improved approaches to this costly social issue. Online supplements are available for both professors and students. A new chapter on hate crimes delves into the complexities faced by victims as they negotiate the reporting process.
